Purpose

- 1 This policy is about creating and maintaining a safe inclusive place for everyone to thrive. Buckinghamshire New University (BNU) recognises the value of mutually rewarding relationships and friendships within our community, that contribute to a dynamic and diverse environment.

Applicability and Scope

- 2 It is important to emphasise that in some circumstances personal relationships are strongly discouraged however, they must not be automatically conflated with misconduct or sexual misconduct. Where personal relationships overlap (or are perceived to overlap) with professional/working relationships, this document sets out appropriate safeguards to avoid harm, protect the integrity of individuals and the University's reputation. This can occur at the outset, during or at the end of a relationship. Therefore, this document reflects key findings and recommended principles concerning sexual misconduct that is well documented and published by Universities UK.
- 3 BNU takes the safety and wellbeing of students and colleagues seriously and works hard to continually develop a culture that embeds safety, equality, diversity and inclusion. Personal relationships can be complex and can involve power differentials. We expect collective responsibility to tackle risks and endorse our zero-tolerance approach to harassment and abuse. BNU colleagues should play their part in helping to create a culture of trust and must always consider what is appropriate conduct. In addition, we encourage people to report concerns and will support people to speak out about breaches of this policy. We recognise the serious and harmful impact of sexual harassment and sexual misconduct and are committed to taking all reasonable steps to prevent such behaviours. We will provide appropriate support to any member of our community who is affected and will respond to concerns promptly, sensitively, and fairly.

Further guidance is available in the BNU Code of Conduct, Respect, Fairness and Inclusion Policy, and the Staff Grievance Policy, which set out expected standards of behaviour and the processes for raising concerns. If you require advice, support, or guidance on reporting or managing an issue, please contact your People Business Partner, who will be able to provide further information on advice and support available.

- 4 Definitions of sexual misconduct, staff-to-student sexual misconduct, personal relationships and other relevant terms have been set out in the definitions section. They are informed by statutory or best practice publications.

Policy

Relationships between staff and students

- 5 BNU recognises recommendations that aim to prevent and tackle sexual misconduct within universities based on a growing understanding of the nature and scale of the issue. Staff must not compromise their professional or ethical responsibilities and BNU expects everyone associated with the University to maintain high professional standards. Accordingly, we acknowledge power differentials between staff and students and strongly discourage personal relationships.

- 6 Personal relationships are prohibited with staff or students who are under the age of 18, or who are over 18 and are vulnerable or 'at risk'. Personal relationships are not permitted where there is a direct professional or supervision responsibility, or involvement in that student's academic studies or welfare. Staff should not enter a financial or business relationship that could compromise or be perceived to compromise their professionalism.
- 7 PhD students who are employed temporarily or permanently as staff (including as demonstrators) are included as staff.
- 8 Staff must confidentially declare a personal relationship with any student, (whether new or existing), to enable an assessment of potential, perceived or actual conflict of interest, breach of trust or confidentiality. This should happen in all circumstances, including if there is a pre-existing relationship or if one develops after enrolment. The assessment will identify actions needed to mitigate any risks. This declaration must be made via the Personal Relationship Declaration Form on Business Connect, and the information will be logged by the People team on the employee's personal record on Business Connect for reporting purposes.

Relationships between staff

- 9 Personal relationships between staff in workplaces aren't uncommon and in many cases are unlikely to cause a perceived or actual conflict of interest or involve power differentials. However, staff and prospective staff must declare a personal relationship in circumstances or occasions that could cause a perceived or actual conflict of interest. This includes existing relationships, ones that develop, or when changes occur. For example, when one party changes department and now works directly with the other party. This declaration must be made via the Personal Relationship Declaration Form on Business Connect, and the information will be logged by the People team on both employees' personal records on Business Connect for reporting purposes.
- 10 Once declared, consideration will be given to actions needed to mitigate any risks, such as alternative line management arrangements or ensuring a staff member can't make decisions that affect the other staff member's employment. Where relevant, consent to share details with colleagues affected by changes made, will be sensitively discussed.

Declaration of personal relationships

- 11 To protect all parties, declarations should be made via the Personal Relationship Declaration Form on Business Connect as soon as reasonably practicable and always within 3 months. A relationship should be declared even if it was previously declared on a job or course application form. Failure to make a declaration may result in disciplinary action being taken.
- 12 As a declaration contains sensitive personal data it will be stored confidentially and securely in line with data protection legislation. The wishes of both parties will be respected as far as is reasonably possible. This includes relationships where the parties may not be “out” publicly or in the workplace.

- 13 Staff and students must advise their Personal Tutor, Line Manager, College Dean or Professional Service or People Business Partner as appropriate. Others may be involved dependent on circumstances e.g. the relevant member of the University Strategy Group (USG) or Council Member. If there is any uncertainty this should be discussed with a relevant person.
- 14 If a personal relationship ends, all parties should continue to conduct themselves professionally in the University and avoid personal disputes which impact the working environment or other colleagues and students. For help and support please contact your People Business Partner, our Employee Assistance Programme (EAP) or student support services.

Guidance on maintaining professional relationships

- 15 To create and maintain a safe, inclusive and professional environment and reduce risks, we expect people to:
 - use a University email account, University telephone, University software and applications and internet access for communications, avoiding personal messaging (such as through Social Media platforms, X, Facebook, Instagram and TikTok) and maintain professionalism in all communications when conducting business and matters relating to the university;
 - do not provide personal phone numbers to students, make alternative arrangements and avoid contact with students outside of reasonable working hours;
 - treat offsite University activities as an extension of the University premises and ensure that University matters are discussed on campus or other appropriate premises;
 - refer colleagues or students with personal support needs to a relevant University support service, such as our Employee Assistance Programme or student counselling. Be mindful to limit your role in providing personal support where this is not part of your duties;
 - avoid accepting gifts from students, unless it is following final assessment completion and deemed to be a minor token of thanks in accordance with the Code of Conduct policy.

This list is not exhaustive and for any doubts you should seek advice from a relevant staff or student contact, such as People Business Partner or personal tutor.
